

The UN has produced the first International Development Cooperation Report , an independently authored analysis of trends in aid quantity and quality, mutual accountability and transparency, South-South cooperation, policy coherence for development and the need to reform the global development cooperation architecture. The report, which was commissioned from DFI by UNDESA, was preliminarily launched at a side-event of the MDG Summit on September 21, of which the summary is now available online

.