

In March 2010, the UK Department for International Development asked DFI to survey developing countries' views of multilateral institutions' performance, to inform its decisions on where to allocate its funding for the next five years. The full report is now being published. It could also be read in conjunction with developing country views on the IMF and World Bank, assembled for the G20 in Freetown and London.