

The UK Department for International Development asked DFI to survey developing country views of multilateral institutions' performance, to help it decide where to allocate funds. The March report interviewed 30 policymakers, and the September report was based on 33 countries' evaluations of institution performance. They complement country views on the IMF and World Bank, assembled for the G20 in Freetown and London .