It is also essential to survey enterprises on their perception of the investment climate and government policies, their intentions of future investment, and their implementation of corporate responsibility programmes, in order to assess how best government can maintain and increase investment levels and ensure that they make the maximum contribution to national development. This is best done in conjunction with FAL surveys, because combining the two reduces the burden of multiple surveys on the private sector and increases the overall response rate by 30-40% of the sample.

Training materials include:

- Awareness of international codes and standards
- Generic questionnaires
- Presentational and practical materials
